

How to Scare the Unwary with Devilish Lies

by Jeremy James

The first so-called 'H-Bomb', the MK-17, weighed over 18 tons, was carried by B-36s and was 'in service' from 1954 to 1957.

It is well known that pedophiles groom and exploit little children by lying to them. The child is dealing with an adult and assumes, at least initially, that he is being truthful. The 'don't tell' phase of this abominable act is often sealed with the threat that harm will come to the child's parents if he or she should ever say anything about their abuse.

Threats like this are very powerful. The perpetrator's lies push them deep into the mind of the child and establish a strong emotional hold over him or her, even into adulthood.

The Cabal that controls this world is exercising much of its hold over humanity through fear and threats. Some of the threats may have a factual basis but many do not. These devious people have learned over many generations to use fear as a strategic tool. They will fabricate outrageous lies to create phony threats that burn into the minds of the general population and affect their behavior.

These include the supposed development of explosive nuclear devices which scientists allege could destroy the world many times over. It is probably fair to say that 99.9 percent of the population believe these devices exist. The propaganda has worked. The Cold War between the USSR and the West, which ran from 1947 to 1991, would have been impossible without this incredible lie. The tension needed to reshape the geopolitical framework of Europe and the world as a whole could only be produced by a threat so great – assured mutual destruction – that entire nations would gladly surrender part of their sovereignty to keep it at bay.

I can vividly recall reading the 55-page booklet issued by the Irish government on the dangers of nuclear fall-out when it first issued in 1965:

The title, 'Bás Beatha', means A Matter of Life or Death.

The blurb on the back cover reads:

"The risk of nuclear war, which has caused the Government to issue this booklet specially for house-holders, may remain for many years. So keep the booklet carefully. Hang it, or place it, where you can easily find it in an emergency – it could mean the difference between life and death for you and for your family."

The Irish booklet laid the stress, not on the explosions per se, but on the deadly fall-out of radioactive dust. This aspect of the 'nuclear threat' was designed to ensure that every nation on earth would live in fear. Countries that believed they would escape the terrible nuclear missiles that would fall on the USA and the USSR would be unable, allegedly, to escape the wave of poisonous dust that would spread through the atmosphere and pollute the entire earth.

Similar exercises were conducted in other countries, such as the ‘duck and cover’ drills in the US in the 1960s.

Without a doubt, this lie had a tremendous effect. Following the fake Cuban missile crisis, which ran for 13 days in October 1962, the world had already been primed for the possibility that ‘atomic bombs’ might kill us all. Booklets like this were never questioned. Had we not already seen the devastation that even a small atomic bomb could cause when two were used to level Hiroshima and Nagasaki? (Had we? No, we hadn’t, but we thought we had. Yet another lie.)

The perspective after the break-up of the USSR

When the USSR fell apart in 1991, there was very little discussion at political level of the threat that this might pose to the security of the Soviet nuclear missile reserve. During a time of great instability, when it looked as though radical elements within the Soviet Bloc might seize control of the nuclear arsenal, the Western press had virtually nothing to say.

One could take this to mean one of two things: (1) Either the threat was so great that Western governments did not wish to alarm the public by discussing it or, (2) there was no threat since explosive nuclear devices did not exist. If option (1) were the case, then one would have expected the threat, such as it was, to have been made known to the public several years after it had passed and books published that explained how close we came to mutual assured destruction. But we got nothing! No comment, no books, nothing. There was no discussion after the event because there was no event!

The real answer is option (2) – explosive nuclear devices do not exist.

Writings which argue that the nuclear threat is a hoax

We first examined this question ten years ago in our paper #76, Why Explosive Nuclear Devices May Not Exist:

Since then various commentators have posted their analysis online, proving that the nuclear threat was a hoax. A number of books have also appeared which arrive at the same conclusion. These include Death Object: Exploding the Nuclear Weapons Hoax by Akio Nakatani (2017), The Nuclear Deception: Nikita Krushchev and the Cuban Missile Crisis by Servando Gonzalez, and Oppenheimer's Deadly Toys: The Nuclear Weapons Hoax by Thos Judge (2023). The latter relates how he was having a social drink with a former UK Prime Minister in a bar next to Westminster Abbey on Christmas Eve in 1982 when the politician said: “The UK has no effective nuclear deterrent, but that isn’t a problem because nobody else has one either.”

A recent book by Dr Michael Palmer, a former professor of biochemistry, also appears to have been well received. Published this year, it is called Hiroshima Revisited: The Evidence that Napalm and Mustard Gas helped Fake the Atomic Bombings. His scientific training has enabled him to show that the “radiation sickness” and “flash burns” attributed to the so-called nuclear explosions were actually caused by mustard gas and napalm. The preface is written by Dr Franklin Stahl, an eminent molecular biologist and recipient of several prestigious awards for his academic work. These include the Thomas Hunt Morgan Medal from the Genetics Society of America for his lifetime contribution to the field of genetics.

We advise readers who have not yet done so to read our earlier paper, #76, since it sets out a lot of material that we will not revisit in this paper.

“The wicked are estranged from the womb: they go astray
as soon as they be born, speaking lies.”
– Psalm 58:3

	This book takes a fresh, in-depth look at the scientific and medical evidence pertaining to the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. It confirms previous research which proved that no atomic bomb was detonated in either city. Beyond that, however, it also analyzes in detail how the medical and physical effects of atomic bombings were faked. It concludes that “radiation sickness” was induced with mustard gas, whose radiation-like biological effects were already well known at the time. The “flash burns” described in many victims were indistinguishable from napalm burns. Radioactive fallout was produced through the dispersal of reactor waste. The book’s final chapter examines the motives behind the faked atomic bombings.

A high ranking insider calls nuclear weapons an outdated tool

There was even an occasion recently where a high ranking insider made a firm public statement urging her fellow countrymen to stop worrying about the so-called nuclear threat. She is quoted as saying:

“As for nuclear deterrence, I would say that deterrence is an outdated doctrine. Nuclear deterrence was effective after World War II, during the Cold War, but not now. No umbrella will help, because now there is a completely different weapon, a completely different nature of war. Nuclear weapons won't scare anyone anymore! There is no need to be afraid and no need to pay attention to it, it is an outdated tool and there is no need to be afraid of it.” – Dalia Grybauskaitė

[Source: <https://eadaily.com/en/news/2025/05/13/there-is-no-need-to-be-afraid-of-russian-nuclear-weapons-grybauskaite-who-emerged-from-oblivion>]

So nuclear weapons are an “outdated tool” that shouldn’t “scare anyone anymore”! This is a coded way of saying that they were needed to drive the Cold War and were dreamt up for that purpose. In short, they were pure propaganda.

Interestingly she refers to a completely new type of weapon but does not indicate what it might be.

So who exactly is this woman, Dalia Grybauskaitė? She served as President of Lithuania from 2009 to 2019 and was a regular attendee at the World Economic Forum in Davos. She has been conferred with the prestigious ‘Knight Grand Cross’ by no fewer than 6 countries (Estonia, Finland, Iceland, Italy, Netherlands, and Norway), along with high chivalric titles and honors by ten others. This places her close to the pinnacle of influence in the Illuminati hierarchy.

Run down, obsolescent systems

We have further evidence that the nuclear threat was designed to underpin the Cold War from the general neglect by the U.S. of its nuclear missile sites. They were poorly maintained during the 1970s and, by 1991, when the USSR broke apart, the degree of neglect had markedly increased. Today they are unfit for purpose and many are being shut down. The public is being told that an entirely new, greatly updated infrastructure is needed – a ‘Golden Dome’ – but funding for this seems to have stalled.

In an article in Time Magazine on the ...Mission to Modernize America’s Aging Nuclear Missiles, September 2022, the author describes his visit to one such site in Wyoming and the many defects he was shown by the local commander, Captain Moffett:

Then there are malfunctions that aren’t marked. Moffett’s computer monitor – the one that enables him to keep watch on a fleet of 10 nuclear-tipped intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs) – has a flashing glitch on the bottom of the screen. His classified phone line has such a weak connection that he can barely hear fellow Air Force officers who are commanding more than 100 other nuclear missiles spread across 9,600 sq. mi. “You can hear them pretty clearly if you stand on an angle, on one leg, and jump up and down,” Moffett says, smiling. “It’s all part of the job. We spend a lot of time saying to ourselves, ‘Hey, how are we going to make this work today?’”

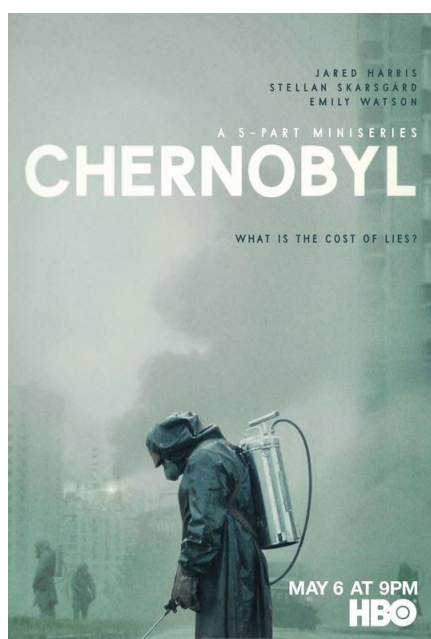

<https://time.com/6212698/nuclear-missiles-icbm-triad-upgrade/>

He went on to say:

Walking into Moffett's capsule at Alpha-01 is like walking into the past. Banks of turquoise electronics racks, industrial cables, and analog controls have been down here since the U.S. military installed the equipment decades ago. Look closely at the machines and you'll find names of manufacturers like Radio Corp. of America, defunct since 1987, and Hughes Aircraft Co., defunct since 1997. Some systems have been updated over the years, but these advances are unrecognizable to anyone who lived through the personal-computer revolution, let alone the internet age. The entire ICBM fleet runs on less computational power than what's now found inside the smartphone in your pocket. When something breaks, the Air Force maintenance crews pull parts from warehouse shelves, pay a contractor to make them to specifications, or even occasionally scavenge them from military museums.

The smartphone in your pocket has more computational power than the "entire ICBM fleet". I think that tells you all you need to know!

Deadly nuclear radiation is another lie

Certain elements, such as radium, thorium, radon and uranium, are known to emit radiation. However, in our opinion, none of these pose a threat to humanity. The 'radiation' in question is simply one of three types of subatomic 'particle': alpha particles, which are harmless helium nuclei; beta particles, which are unattached electrons; and gamma rays, which are high-energy photons. Of these three, only gamma rays could cause health problems but only if the source was intense and prolonged. No naturally occurring element, not even uranium, comes remotely close to emitting a continuous stream of high-intensity gamma radiation.

The explosion at Chernobyl in 1986 is often cited as proof that the dust produced by a nuclear reactor can cause serious health problems, but is this really the case? The dust that was allegedly released in large quantities into the atmosphere at Chernobyl was said to comprise a wide range of radioactive isotopes, including Iodine 131, Cesium 137, Strontium 90, Tellurium 132, Xenon 133, Plutonium 239, and a number of Uranium isotopes. Several of these have multi-year half lives. If they were radioactively dangerous – and not just chemically hazardous – they should have caused extensive, highly visible biological damage for hundreds of miles in all directions around Chernobyl. If the scientists were right, the region should have been uninhabitable for decades and strange mutations, in both plants and animals, should have been commonplace.

Did that happen? No, it didn't. The region in the immediate vicinity of Chernobyl showed no discernible environmental damage – other than chemical damage close to the reactor – either at the time of the explosion or for decades thereafter.

What about the 'Chernobyl children' who were born after 1986 with serious physical deformities and mental handicaps? These infants were probably brought to Chernobyl from various parts of the Soviet Union and the wider Communist Bloc in order to bolster the radiation myth. Footage shown on television of these unfortunate children did more to make the Chernobyl disaster believable than perhaps any other aspect of this carefully managed deception.

The following images, all courtesy of the street-view feature in Google Earth, show that the countryside around Chernobyl looks no different today from any similar scene across the former Soviet Union:

As we have already shown, Dr Palmer and other commentators have convincingly argued that the ‘radiation’ effects at both Hiroshima and Nagasaki were fabricated using napalm and mustard gas. Furthermore, the radiation that should have been dangerously abundant at nuclear test sites like Bikini Atoll is known to be non-existent. So too is any physical evidence that a series of highly destructive explosions occurred at these locations.

Celebrity Science

The world that God created is incredibly rich in wonder and beauty. Its laws alone are unbelievably intricate and way beyond the understanding of man. It is a joy and a pleasure to study and explore them. Everywhere we look we find awesome evidence of His handiwork. Satan and his Cabal of human servants hate this. They try as best they can to lure men into a false perception of God’s creation. They know that the more clearly we see what the LORD has actually done, the more receptive we are to His sovereignty and grace.

The Satanists have been building a false model of reality for the past 500 years. They have convinced most of mankind that the earth is a ball spinning in space, rotating aimlessly in a vast cold vacuum, and sitting at the edge of an infinite universe filled with billions of similar 'solar systems'. This is ALL complete nonsense. Nothing we see in the night sky is billions of light-years away. Light itself is instantaneous and does not spend any time 'travelling' through space. It has no speed. Therefore the equation  $E=mc^2$ , where  $c$  is the 'speed of light', is also complete nonsense.

Was this done deliberately? Of course it was! The ultra-wealthy Satanists who have been controlling the world economy and political activities for the past 500 years recruited some very clever people to develop this false model of reality. They included men like Einstein, Marx, Freud, and Darwin who were employed to dream up a system of thought where everything could be explained without reference to God and His wonderful act of creation. Much of this vile Satanic counterfeit was developed between 1840 and 1940 and then promulgated in the media and educational institutions with little or no reference to the vast amount of evidence which contradicted and refuted their nonsensical claims.

Further, faster, smaller, older

One of their greatest psychological tricks was to push the rationale for everything just beyond the bounds of human perception. In 'quantum physics' nothing could actually be observed, only inferred through complex mathematical equations. They then began to treat these inferred entities as real physical realities. The dozens of subatomic particles which are the subject of countless doctoral theses and hugely expensive experimental research are all imaginary. They exist only in the minds of those who invented them.

Much the same is true of time. They fabricated the fossils of 'dinosaurs' in the 1850s and got the world to believe the earth was densely inhabited with these reptilian creatures for 180 million years. By building museums and stocking them with examples of these enormous manmade 'animals', they seduced the public with sensational accounts of a prehistoric world that was vastly different from the one we know today.

By stretching time and space in this way, and locating vital evidence beyond the scope of personal enquiry and inspection, they made it very difficult for the average person to refute what they were saying. Bit by bit scientists became the new priests, sole possessors of the arcane knowledge that explains how and why the world is as it is.

Their basic guiding principle was extremely simple: Deny the Creator, deny His handiwork, and deny His Word (the Bible). Once you see that modern science has been subverted for this purpose, that vast sums of money have been spent on manufacturing and promoting this false cosmology, and that it is controlled by a small clique of Christ-hating perverts and psychopaths, you can easily see how the 'nuclear' hoax fits into their dark plan to enslave humanity.

A statue of Satan in the form of Shiva the Destroyer at the CERN super-collider complex in Geneva. His 'dance' represents his absolute control over all things. Oppenheimer famously compared the so-called atomic bomb with the capriciously destructive power of this Hindu demon.

CONCLUSION

More and more people are realizing that the atomic-quantum-relativistic-evolving-intergalactic model of creation is riddled with defects, that it is a huge work of fiction designed to cut them off from God. For this reason the Cabal have to continually release fresh propaganda and program the masses on an ongoing basis. They have to turn their leading scientists and pioneers of the 'new reality' into household names. Hollywood produces box-office movies that glamorize space travel, relativity, black holes, quantum mechanics, and the 'heroes' who contributed to the creation of this false reality – such as Oppenheimer (on the Manhattan Project), The Theory of Everything (on the life of Stephen Hawking), Radioactive (on the life of Marie Curie), Copenhagen (about Neils Bohr and Werner Heisenberg), Creation (on the life of Charles Darwin), and so on.

Stephen Hawking made four cameo appearances on *The Simpsons

As we mentioned in a previous paper, we even find the magic formula of the nuclear age,  $E=mc^2$ , being cited in a cartoon series like The Simpsons and in numerous other places. Perhaps the most outrageous piece of goofy (and geeky) propaganda was The Big Bang Theory, a comedy show that ran for about twelve years on prime time television. Its introductory segment, shown in every episode, was a rapid audio-visual summary of the hoax science paradigm over the centuries.

If you don't understand modern science, it's not because you're stupid. Schrodinger's Cat existed only in the mind of the pedophile who dreamt it up. Einstein's 'thought experiments' (Gedankenexperimente), on which he based his theory of relativity, were only a deceitful way to make definitive statements about reality which had no experimental support or empirical foundation. Newton's theory of gravity is still nothing but a theory, a magical hypothesis which claims (without proof) that matter attracts matter. Quantum computing is found only in the realm of science fiction, just like the dinosaurs in Jurassic Park. The world is flat and stationary, as every airline pilot knows (but won't admit). And explosive nuclear devices do not exist.

Is Iran developing a nuclear weapon? No, it isn't but the Cabal want the public to believe it is. They use tricks like this to justify terrible wars.

For readers who wish to study this topic in greater depth, please see the papers listed in the sections of our website headed ‘Evolution’ and ‘True Cosmology and Satan’s Alternative Reality’.

We do not wish to leave the reader with the impression that deadly genocidal ballistic weapons do not exist. They certainly do. Thermobaric bombs, for example, can demolish a large city. While she did not describe the new weapon that the Cabal possesses, Dalia Grybauskaitė may have been referring to earthquake generating technology. Her cronies may even have developed large-scale ballistic devices which exploit physical, Tesla-type laws that are not yet widely known or understood. They also operate a world-wide network of energy generators that can create extreme weather patterns virtually anywhere, including protracted drought conditions, turbo-charged tornadoes, and massive thunder-storms that can sweep away roads and bridges in just a few hours.

The Word of God asks that we keep calm and trust in His Holy Name. Those who stand with Christ and abide by his commandments will not be shaken. The Enemy is like a monstrous carnivore restrained by a thick glass screen. He can roar at a terrifying pitch and make all kinds of threatening gestures, but he can’t break through the screen. He may charge at it several times and give the impression that he is about to succeed, but it will never happen. The prince of this world was cast out at Calvary and has no power to touch the saints!

We must continue to do what we can to bring the Gospel to those who have not yet accepted our Lord Jesus Christ as their saviour.
